

Check-up on Healthcare

The pandemic has put Italian healthcare and health services companies under strong pressure and forced them to redefine priorities, organizational models, and the cognitive maps underlying decision-making processes and management tools. This titanic effort that is analyzed and considered systemically in the articles of this dossier to give life to an overall operation of sensemaking, that is also able to provide an overview of the main current and future challenges for a sector of extraordinary importance that is characterized by a dense network of interconnections with our country's economic and social system.

By Francesca Lecci

